AN UNSAFE SAVING FUND.

The Warfare Between the Depositors of the National Safety Trust Company and the Directors of that Institution—The Fight Grows Warm, and Begins to be Interesting—Only $941,320 Involved in the Dispute.

The National Safety and Trust Company was an institution which formerly did business at the southwest corner of Third and Walnut streets. The Board of Directors of the institution consisted of the following gentlemen:—Messrs. Henry B. Benner, Samuel K. Ashton, Joseph B. Barry, F. Carroll Brewer, Edward L. Carter, Robert Selridge, C. Landreth Munns, Francis Lee, Joseph Yerkes, James L. Stephens.

On the 12th inst. the depositors and directors were in a meeting at the office of the National Safety and Trust Company, for the purpose of settling the accounts of the institution.

At this time the Chairman of the directors, Mr. Benner, stated that he had no objection to the depositors' proposal, but that he was not authorized to give any guarantee.

The Chairman of the depositors, Mr. Miller, stated that he was not authorized to give any guarantee, but that he was not authorized to give any guarantee.

has a perpetual charter, and is one of the best and most secure in the country. As the price of lots in Laurel Hill is not above the average of those of other great cemeteries, cheapness is combined with the beauty of its scenery and the convenience of its location, to render it one of the most desirable institutions of the kind now in successful operation.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE STAMFORD (ENGLAND) BULL-BURNING—How the FUN WAS SPOILED BY THE "SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS"—On the 13th of the month, the anniversary of the burning of the bull in Stamford, England, was celebrated in this city.

The custom is said to have dated from the day of King John. One day, as William, Earl of Warren, was standing on the battlements of his castle, he witnessed a fight between two bulls in the meadow.
